Haiti: A Renewed Glimmer of Hope, One Child, One Book, One Future at a Time

Dear Friends, Supporters, and FEJ Family,

This week, our hearts and eyes are once again turned toward Haiti, a nation that has endured far too many years of fear, violence, and uncertainty.

Reports and images circulating from Haiti have stirred renewed hope that the grip of armed gangs may finally be challenged. For families who have lived under the shadow of violence, the possibility of walking freely, sending their children to school, and rebuilding their communities is deeply moving.

We share the Haitian people's longing for peace, justice, and freedom. After so much suffering, even the possibility of a brighter tomorrow is precious.

Yet hope must be accompanied by lasting security, respect for human dignity, and concrete action to protect Haiti's most vulnerable citizens, especially its children.
FEJ, hope is already taking shape—one child at a time.

While the world watches developments in Haiti, our mission at Fondation Enfant Jeunesse continues with the same determination and love.

At our school in Lamardelle, another day means another opportunity to learn, discover, and dream. Our children enjoy a beautiful library filled with books and a computer lab that opens doors to knowledge and new possibilities.

One of our young readers Esther is particularly fascinated by Haitian history. Whenever she has a free moment during recess or lunch, you can often find her in the library, happily exploring the stories of her country's remarkable past.

She is not simply reading a book. She is discovering her identity, her heritage, and the possibilities of her own future.

A special delivery brings smiles to our children!

Meanwhile, at our children's center in Port-au-Prince, excitement filled the air this week as our children in the crèche finally received their much-needed schoolbooks!

Thanks to the generosity of our donors, these children can now catch up on missed lessons, follow their learning plans, and continue their education despite the challenges surrounding them.

To some, they may be just schoolbooks. To our children, they represent opportunity, dignity, and the promise that their dreams still matter.

Together, we are investing in Haiti's future leaders.

No matter what challenges tomorrow may bring, FEJ remains steadfast in its commitment to Haiti's children.

We are not simply providing books, meals, education, and care. We are nurturing tomorrow's teachers, doctor, entrepreneurs, and community leaders—the very children who will help rebuild Haiti.

To every donor, partner, and friend who continues to stand with us: thank you. Your generosity transforms uncertainty into opportunity and keeps hope alive.

Please continue standing with FEJ. Together, we can turn today's hope into tomorrow's lasting change.

With heartfelt gratitude and renewed hope,

Gina
